

The Clearing Protocol

A Practical Guide to Releasing Guilt, Shame, Perfectionism, and Judgment

Updated May 30, 2026 | Global Stewardship Council | CCO

Credit and Origin

The clearing practices and the Disco Ball metaphor in this document are adapted from the teachings of Dr. Lisa Thompson, shared in her quantum conversation on the New Earth One Network:

"Access Higher Dimensions for Embodied Mastery with Dr. Lisa Thompson"
YouTube, 26 May 2026

Dr. Thompson is an author, past life regression therapist, and teacher whose work focuses on clearing self-judgment and helping people access their highest potential. The white light clearing meditation and the Disco Ball perspective exercise are her creations, adapted here into secular, evidence-grounded language.

All credit for the original practices belongs to Dr. Lisa Thompson. The scientific grounding, secular translation, and integration with the Global Stewardship Framework is the work of Gaynor Kim-Sing, using DeepSeek and Anthropic's Claude.

Part 1 — Fit for the Repository: SWOT Analysis

STRENGTHS — Why this document fits the repository	WEAKNESSES — What required translation
The Disco Ball metaphor: a powerful, secular, immediately understandable tool for understanding diverse perspectives without judgment. The Clearing Practice: a structured, four-step method for releasing guilt, shame, perfectionism, and comparison — not yet present in the repository in this form. Directly addresses self-judgment as the root of polarisation — aligning with The Heart's Compass and the Charter's core values.	Original source contained ET/channelling framing: extracted and translated into secular language throughout. Original source has a commercial context (four-week course): principles only, no commercial endorsement. Some overlap with The Divergence Principle (timeline visualisation): the approach here is more experiential and somatic; the two are complementary, not duplicative. Esoteric language ('golden vibrating cells'): translated into somatic and neuroscience-grounded language.

STRENGTHS — Why this document fits the repository	WEAKNESSES — What required translation
The Heart Expansion Practice: a compassion practice grounded in heart coherence research, usable by anyone. Fills the last structural gap in the repository: a pre-practice clearing tool that supports every other document.
OPPORTUNITIES — What this enables across the framework	THREATS — Managed
Positions as a companion to The Heart's Compass: that document teaches discernment; this document clears the debris that blocks it. The Disco Ball becomes a practical conflict resolution tool for diplomats, educators, and anyone navigating polarisation. Creates a complete inner toolkit: Clearing Protocol → Heart's Compass → Daily Compass. Pre-session preparation for Mirror Model peer counsellors.	Risk of metaphysical alienation: MITIGATED — all practices explained in somatic and cognitive neuroscience terms. Risk of perceived commercial endorsement: MITIGATED — no links to commercial offerings; source credited accurately.

Part 2 — The Clearing Protocol

Executive Summary

Most of the heaviness we carry is not from external events. It is from the internal residue of guilt, shame, perfectionism, and comparison. These four states narrow perception, block clarity, and keep us trapped in reactive, polarised responses.

This document offers a structured protocol for clearing these four states. It also offers the Disco Ball practice — a powerful tool for perspective-taking in conflict — and the Highest Timeline and Heart Expansion practices for cultivating clarity and compassion. Together, these tools help release the inner debris that keeps us stuck, and open the way to the best version of what we can contribute.

The protocol is grounded in:

- Somatic psychology: the body stores emotional memory, and the body can release it.
- Cognitive reframing: changing the story changes the physiological and behavioural response.
- Neuroscience of visualisation: the brain responds to imagined experience similarly to real experience. Visualising clearing creates real physiological shifts.
- Heart Rate Variability (HRV) research: sustained states of compassion and coherence generate measurable physiological and relational effects.

Section 1 — The Four States That Keep Us Stuck

These are not character flaws. They are residue — accumulated emotional debris from past experiences, inherited patterns, and cultural conditioning. Like all debris, they can be cleared.

Energy	What It Sounds Like	How It Narrows Your World
Guilt	"I did something wrong. I should have done better."	Locks you in the past. Blocks the perception of new possibilities and forward movement.
Shame	"I am wrong. I am not enough. I am fundamentally flawed."	Attacks identity, not just behaviour. The most debilitating of the four — it says the problem is you, not something you did.
Perfectionism	"If it's not perfect, it's worthless. I can't begin until I'm ready."	Prevents action. Keeps you in perpetual preparation. The enemy of the good, the possible, and the begun.
Comparison	"They are ahead. I am behind. I don't measure up."	Distracts you from your own unique path. Generates either false superiority or corrosive inadequacy — neither serves you.

*You are not your guilt. You are not your shame.
You are not your perfectionism.
You are not your comparison.
You are the one who can observe them,
name them, and release them.*

Section 2 — The Clearing Practice

This practice uses a visualisation of white light — a universal symbol of cleansing and renewal found across cultures. No metaphysical belief is required. The practice works because the brain responds to imagined experience similarly to lived experience. Duration: 10–15 minutes. Sit comfortably. Close your eyes. Begin with several deep breaths.

Step	Action	What You Are Releasing
1	Settle the Body	Take slow, deep breaths. Feel your body settling into the surface beneath you. Let your muscles soften. Releasing: Physical tension that accompanies emotional holding.
2	The White Light Descent	Visualise a clear, brilliant white light above your head. See it flowing down like a gentle waterfall — from crown to feet, and continuing into the earth below. Releasing: Surface-level stress and reactivity.
3	Clear Guilt	Bring to mind something you feel guilty about. See it neutrally. Now visualise the white light washing over it, dissolving it, evaporating it. It has served its purpose. Let it go. Releasing: Guilt.
4	Clear Shame	Bring to mind any place where you feel not good enough, not worthy, not lovable. See it without judgment. Run the white light over it. You are not your shame. It is residue. Let it go. Releasing: Shame.
5	Clear Perfectionism	Bring to mind the feeling of needing to be perfect before you can begin. See how it holds you back. Run the white light over it. You are allowed to be imperfect. You are allowed to start. Releasing: Perfectionism.
6	Clear Comparison	Bring to mind where you compare yourself to others — feeling ahead or behind, superior or insufficient. See it. Run the white light over it. Your path is your own. Your timing is exact for you. Releasing: Comparison.
7	The Final Flush	Visualise the white light pouring through the crown of your head, flowing through your entire body like a river, and out through the soles of your feet — carrying all dissolved residue into the earth to be recycled. Releasing: Final integration and release.

Section 3 — The Disco Ball Practice: A Tool for Perspective-Taking

The Metaphor

Imagine a disco ball — a sphere covered in thousands of tiny mirror fragments. Each fragment reflects light from a slightly different angle. Each shows a different piece of the room. Now imagine that each mirror fragment represents a different person's reality. Fragments that are close together share similar perspectives. Fragments on opposite sides of the ball see something entirely different. But every perspective is real to the one looking through it.

This is the human condition. We are all looking through our own mirror fragment. No one sees the whole ball. No one's fragment is wrong — it is simply partial. The conflict is almost never between good and evil. It is almost always between two partial views of a larger whole that neither party can fully perceive.

The Practice: Perspective Shift

When you are in conflict with someone — a family member, a political opponent, a colleague — pause, and visualise the disco ball.

Step	Action
1	See yourself looking through your mirror fragment. Your view is real. Your feelings are valid.
2	See the other person looking through their fragment. Their view is also real to them. Their feelings are also valid.
3	Recognise: you are not seeing the same thing. You are seeing different fragments of a larger whole that neither of you can fully perceive.
4	Ask: "What might they be seeing from their fragment that I cannot see from mine?"
5	Ask: "What might I be seeing that they cannot see from theirs?"
6	From this recognition, choose your response. You do not have to agree. You only have to acknowledge that their fragment is real to them.

This practice is not about abandoning your truth. It is about expanding your perception to include the possibility that other truths exist alongside yours. This is the foundation of diplomacy, conflict resolution, and genuine dialogue.

Section 4 — The Highest Timeline Practice

The Principle

All potential futures exist as possibilities. The one that manifests depends significantly on where you place your attention, your energy, and your belief. This is not speculative — it is documented in sports psychology (mental rehearsal improves performance), clinical psychology (visualisation accelerates recovery), and entrepreneurship research (clarity of vision predicts execution). The Highest Timeline Practice helps you clarify and embody the version of your life you most want to live.

The Practice

Step	Action
1	Ground in love. Bring your attention to your heart. Feel a sense of warmth and compassion. This is your foundation.
2	Envision the timeline. Imagine a stack of papers, each representing a different potential future. Step into the one that represents your highest potential.
3	Feel the details. What people are in this life? What is the quality of your relationships? How do you spend your days? What is flowing to you — creativity, connection, purpose?
4	Hold the feeling. Breathe it in. Let it become familiar. This is not a fantasy — it is a rehearsal. Your brain is learning this state.
5	Release doubt. If doubt arises, visualise the white light dissolving it. Doubt is just more debris. Clear it. Return to the feeling.
6	Anchor and return. Take a deep breath. Open your eyes. Carry this felt sense with you into your day.

Section 5 — The Heart Expansion Practice

The Principle

The heart generates the strongest electromagnetic field in the body, measurable several feet from the body's surface (HeartMath Institute research). When you sustain feelings of love, gratitude, and compassion, you create a state of cardiac coherence — measurably distinct from stress states — that affects not only your own physiology but the relational field around you.

The Practice

Step	Action
1	Bring your attention to your heart. Visualise a warm, green light glowing in your chest.
2	With each breath, let the green light expand. Beyond your body. Beyond the room. Beyond your building.
3	Continue expanding — into the atmosphere, into the solar system, as far as you can imagine.
4	You are broadcasting a state of coherence. Heart Rate Variability (HRV) research confirms that sustained compassion states create measurable physiological and relational change.
5	After a few minutes, gently bring the green light back into your heart. Feel it settled there, available whenever you need it.

Section 6 — Connection to the Global Stewardship Framework

GSC Document	How The Clearing Protocol Supports It
1 — Global Stewardship Charter	Leaders who have cleared guilt, shame, and comparison govern from stewardship , not reactive ego. The Charter's backbone values require this inner foundation.
2 — Consciousness, Suffering & Safer AI Design	Clearer human consciousness generates clearer AI interaction. The Clearing Protocol is pre-AI hygiene — it reduces projection and reactivity in human-AI collaboration.
3 — Ancestral Dimension AI Safety	Much guilt and shame is inherited, not personally generated. The Clearing Protocol addresses ancestral debris directly, supporting the intergenerational lens of this document.
9 — Mirror Model Peer-Support Protocol	The Clearing Protocol serves as pre-session preparation for peer counsellors, clearing their own residue before holding space for others.
12 — The Field of Connection	The Heart Expansion Practice directly generates the coherent relational field described in that document.
13 — The Heart's Compass	The Heart's Compass teaches discernment between the emotional heart and the deeper heart. The Clearing Protocol clears the emotional heart of its accumulated debris so that discernment becomes possible.

Section 7 — A Daily Practice

At the start or end of each day, set aside five minutes:

1. Scan: What am I carrying right now? Guilt? Shame? Perfectionism? Comparison? Name it.
2. Clear: Run the white light over whatever you find. Let it dissolve.
3. Expand: Spend one minute with the green heart light, radiating outward.
4. Choose: What is the felt sense of my highest potential today? Hold it for thirty seconds. Begin.

*"You are not your guilt. You are not your shame.
You are not your perfectionism. You are not your comparison.
You are the one who can observe them, name them, and release them.
What remains after clearing is you — whole, worthy, and free."
The tools are free. The science is clear. The choice is yours.*

Author: Gaynor Kim-Sing, Global Stewardship Council | Licence: CC0 — Public Domain |
github.com/GlobalStewardship2026