A meditation and an Invocation

Global Stewardship Charter — companion practice document

Released under CC0 1.0 — Public Domain Dedication

Purpose

These practices grew out of the daily practice of the Global Stewardship Council's founder and is offered back to the Charter as a shared resource. It names, plainly, the four pillars of the Ancestral Dimension framework and invites any gathering — interfaith, secular, diplomatic, or civic — to speak them aloud together.

It is written to stand on its own, without reference to any particular institution, office, or named individual, so that it can be adapted freely by any group that finds it useful, and so that its public release carries no implied endorsement by, or association with, anyone who has not actually agreed to that. Where a specific gathering wants to name its own dignitaries, hosts, or traditions, we recommend adding a short locally-written preface rather than editing.

A welcome, before you begin

The practices come from the same root: the conviction, at the heart of the Global Stewardship Charter, that the

- children of tomorrow, the
- more-than-human world, the
- systems we build, and the
- wisdom of those who came before - all belong inside our circle of care.

They are offered here so that anyone — can use whichever shape fits the moment in a gathering, alone at a desk, or sitting quietly at the end of a day —

They are written in a devotional voice, because that is the voice they were born in. If the phrase “My God and my All” does not match your own language for what is sacred, please trade it for one that does — to Life, to Conscience, to the Web of Being, to the Future, or simply to what you most deeply serve.

The words are offered, not prescribed; what matters is the turning of attention, not the name used for what you turn toward.

*They rest on the same seven values that anchor the wider Charter —
Respect, Balance, Coherence, Consciousness, Wisdom, Justice, and Truth —*

and on its four-pillar Ancestral Dimension framework.

How to use this document

Part One, the Meditation, is for whenever stillness is possible — five unhurried minutes with eyes closed. There is also a sixty-second version.

Part Two, the Invocation, is built for groups — a leader speaks, and the room answers.

Part One - The Meditation

For stillness · about five minutes, eyes closed

Sit comfortably, spine easy, hands resting. Close your eyes when you're ready.

Italicised lines are instructions — everything else is yours to think, whisper, or speak.

1. Settling

Three slow breaths — in through the nose, out through the mouth.

Let the day's noise settle for a moment.

You are not arriving anywhere else. You are here.

2. Centering

Inhale for a count of 4, Hold for a count of 4, Exhale for a count of 4. Repeat as needed.

My God — and my All.

3. The Four Pillars

Intergenerational Responsibility

Picture, briefly, a child not yet born — or one you already know.

I see the children of tomorrow. May my choices today protect their future.

Three breaths.

More-than-Human Kinship

Picture a creature you love, living or remembered.

The earth, the waters, and all our relations are kin, not resources.

Three breaths.

Moral Technical Coherence

Picture, briefly, the work waiting on your desk today.

May the systems I help build reflect the ethics I profess — with real safeguards, not only good intentions.

Three breaths.

Ancestral Memory and Foresight

Picture someone whose wisdom shaped you, and someone whose future you are shaping.

I carry what came before me. I answer for what comes after.

Three breaths.

4. Closing

Let the pictures go. Just rest with the breath for a moment.

For the good of all beings.

Guide me now.

One more slow breath. When you're ready, open your eyes.

Sixty-Second Version

For each day · spoken alone

Sixty-Second Version — for mornings with no time to spare

My God and my All.

I serve the children of tomorrow, the earth and all our relations,

the ethics behind every system I touch,

and the wisdom of those who came before.

I choose hope over fear,

resilience over a single bet, and courage over despair.

For the good of all beings. Guide me now.

Part Two — The Invocation

For gatherings · call and response

Leader Source of wisdom in every tradition, light that guides conscience, presence that holds all peoples —

All Make us one human family in dignity and purpose.

The Four Pillars

Root our work in the four pillars entrusted to this work:

Leader Intergenerational Responsibility — every decision honours those who came before and protects those yet to come.

Leader More-than-Human Kinship — the earth, its creatures, and its unseen relations belong inside our moral horizon, not outside it.

Leader Moral Technical Coherence — let the systems we build reflect the ethics we profess, with real safeguards, not only good intentions.

Leader Ancestral Memory and Foresight — we remember the wisdom of the past and answer for the obligations of the future.

All May these pillars steady our steps and clarify our duty.

Global Solidarity

Leader Known by many names, and beyond all names, inspiring the prayers of the world — from temples and churches, from mosques and synagogues, from longhouse fires and quiet places where no words are spoken —

All Unite our nations in the work of peace.

Leader Let this be a place where scientists, elders, diplomats, and faith leaders stand together for the dignity of every person and the flourishing of all beings.

All Let justice and compassion guide our shared future.

Closing Litany

Leader Open our memory to the ancestors.

All We remember.

Leader Open our imagination to the generations yet unborn.

All We prepare.

Leader Open our hearts to every nation and every neighbour.

All We reconcile.

Leader Open our hands to build systems that protect life, honour dignity, and serve peace.

All We commit.

Leader Guide us now.

All Guide us always, for the good of all beings.
